THE CYCLONE'S DESTRUCTIVE

NESS.

The investigation of Friday made apparent that the number of persons killed in the St. Louis cyclone is not less than 400 while the direct losses of property will reach $20,000,000. When it is remembered that this loss was inflicted within the space of a few minutes it is possible to gain some idea of the enormous power of the storm which inflicted it.

According to the local papers of the "cyclone belt" and according to the derivation of the word, the storm, which in the official vernacular of the Signal Service was a "cyclone," was unquestionably a true cyclone, and whenever the word "cyclone" is telegraphed from the West it describes a storm of this character, a vortex or maelstrom of opposing and rapidly whirling currents, charged with electricity and exerting a force of destructiveness to which that of the wildest hurricane is hardly comparable. It is not yet possible to explain how such a storm could have passed through a great and crowded city like St. Louis without killing thousands instead of hundreds. How, for instance, could a large building like the City Hospital, crowded with patients, have been wrecked without the loss of a single life? How could roof after roof have been lifted off and wall after wall have been taken out in places where no lives were lost at all?

The fact that no satisfactory answer can be given to the question shows how little we know of the cyclone. It has been known utterly to wreck a substantial brick building on one side of the street and leave frame buildings on the other unharmed. It will frequently take out a side or front wall from a dwelling, leaving furniture and brick-raft inside in their usual order. It seems to rise and fall, bounding and rebounding, and doing its worst destruction by something wholly different from the ordinary power of the wind.

St. Louis is a city of half a million people, and this cyclone passed through some of its most thickly populated quarters. Had any straight-blowning hurricane possessed such tremendous power accompanying its steady sweep, its path through the parts of St. Louis visited by this cyclone would probably have been marked by 50,000 dead instead of 500. But fortunately no hurricane ever has such power. It resides in the cyclone and in the cyclone only.

The Signal Service ought to set to work collecting the data which will enable it to explain not only the origin of cyclones but their entire history. No other work it can do is of greater importance to science or to the country.—New York World.

WHY HORSES' KNEES BECOME RENT.

Much difference of opinion exists as to the cause of bent knees in horses. One eminent authority thinks it almost invariably due to corns or other diseases of the hind portion of the foot, which induces the animal to ease his heels. The back tendons are thereby relieved, and contraction of the back tendons follow through disuse. Prof. Almond at a recent meeting of veterinarians in London, expressed a different view. His experience leads him to conclude that one of the most common causes of bent knees in young horses is their being tied up in stalls where the front of the standing ground is higher than the back. He believes there is no more prolific source of the mischief than the constrained endeavor of the horse to maintain its position high in front. If a horse subjected to such conditions were let loose, it

Trimming a Straw Hat.
Are you going to trim your own hat? If so, here is a model. It is a violet straw, trimmed with white and violet tulle, white, carnations and mauve and white chine ribbon. Two yards of tulle, one yard of each color; six carnations and foliage; one and three-quarter yards of ribbon and an ornament. Design by making your ribbon up into a bow composed of two loops and five ends. If the ribbon is gray, it will be stiff enough without wiring. The ends should be upstanding and the two loops resting on the brim. Sew this bow upon the left hand side of your hat, then fold your two colored tulle together and place them loosely around the hat, as shown in the sketch. In doing this you will cover the brim and hide the shape of the crown. Then fix your pasted ornament at the foot of your bow, and on the right side of the hat mount three carnations and their foliage, and the remaining flowers and leaves play under the brim, which should turn up a little at the back. This will be found a very becoming and dainty hat.

Kentucky.

[Stolen from a Missouri exchange.] When you talk about there being a better state than Kentucky, every potato thinks it is, every cabbage shakes its head, every beet sets out in the face, every onion grows stronger, every oat field is shocked, the rye stalks its head, the corn pricks up its ears and every foot of ground kicks.

Shallow Plowing.

Here is what an exchange says about plowing corn:

"Omit corn shallow; avoid cutting or displacing the roots which lie very near the surface of the ground; don't stir the soil beyond a depth of two inches. Shallow cultivation is just as effective in killing weeds and conserving moisture as deep cultivation, and the growth of the corn is not checked nor its vitality impaired by tearing and lacerating the roots, and 'keep everlastingly at it' until the tassels appear."

K. T. Resolutions.

Richmond Commandery No. 19, Regular meeting, June 2nd:

Be it resolved, That the sincere thanks of this Commandery be and hereby tendered to the ladies of the Richmond Musical Club for their beautiful music furnished at our late convalesce by them.

2d. That the same be tendered to Dr. L. H. Blanton for the use of the University chapel and grounds, as well as for the reception given by him to the Knights.

3d. That the same be extended to Miss Lloyd and the ladies of the Madison Institute for similar courtesies shown our guests.

4th. To all those ladies who so kindly and diligently gave their service in the preparation and serving of refreshments during the two days of the convalesce, we are especially indebted, because without their help our meeting could not have been the grand success it was.

Finally we desire to congratulate the Commandery as well as the citizens, one and all, on the unanimous opinion expressed by visiting Knights on the cordial reception and courteous hospitality extended to them while in our city.

It Catches Them.

Harvey Chenuit, Jr., has erected one of his patented fly catchers for brushing the flies from cattle. This device was described some months ago when the patent was obtained. The animal goes into an enclosure that has a sort of cupola. A cane screen scares the flies and they rise into the cupola. The animal goes out through a dark passage entirely rid of the pests. If you desire to relieve your cattle of flies, Mr. Chenuit has the machine to do it.

Believes in Masonry.

Richmond Commandery No. 19 has presented to Mrs. J. B. Willis a handsome gold combination clock pendant, suitably engraved, as a memento of their appreciation of valuable services rendered during the recent convalesce.

When the souvenir was given to Mrs. Willis she thanked the donors, saying that nothing was needed to increase her admiration for the order, saying that her grandfather, Capt. James De Jarnet, was captured at Dudley's Defeat, and would have been slain had he not been a Mason. There were some Masons among the British.

Decorations of Confederate Graves.

Saturday last a considerable number of people assembled at the Confederate lot in Richmond cemetery. Among them were Confederate veterans Dr. J. M. Peyton, Dr. L. H. Blanton, Othello Oldham, S. B. Deatherage, Boyle D. F. Patton, E. B. Breck, C. D. Fattie, J. D. Feeny, Joe Collins, Pres. Oldham, T. D. Tevis, J. S. White, Dudley Tribble, J. P. Simmons, Thomas Thorne, Dr. L. J. Harris, Thomas Oldham, Dr. L. J. Harris, Owen McKee, James Cosby, Joe T. Jones, Tom. Branner, H. C. Mills and perhaps others.

Dr. Peyton was master of ceremonies. Rev. Dr. Blanton offered prayer.

Talbot Jackson, son of a Confederate soldier, delivered an eloquent oration portraying the hardships, joys, sorrow and valor of Confederate soldiers.

Dr. Peyton delivered a pleasing eulogy upon the southern women, describing their efforts, sacrifices and struggles for the Lost Cause.

Rev. Jasper K. Smith, of the Second Presbyterian church, brought opening prayer to the eyes of the sturdy veterans by his eloquent oration. He too is the son of a veteran. His father, earnestness, choice word painting, comprehension of the subject, and lack of artificial oration. He said a man who braves life for a cause he thinks is right is a hero.

A select choir sang the Bonnie Blue Flag and the Star Spangled Banner.

Flowers were scattered over the lot, and on veterans graves in other lots in the cemetery.

A bugleman marked the divisions in the program, instead of a band.

Rev. W. F. Smith, of the Christian church, pronounced the benediction.

"A monument should be built."

THE FAITHFUL OLD HORSE YET WANTED.

The abandonment of horse cars, threatening use of electric and cable cars in country and city, and the growing use of the bicycle for pleasure riding have been the occasion of much writing to show that the horse will soon have to "step aside" and that his occupation will be gone. But this prediction will not be borne out.

The horse will remain as he has been for thousands of years—one of man's best companions. This is not the first time it has been said his usefulness had departed.

With the introduction of the steam motor, many short sighted persons said the end of him had come. Before steam, the commerce of the country was transported in pack trains on land, and the slow going sailing vessel on water. The pack train and stage coach utilized many horses, and was stimulating to the stock raising business. The steam locomotive was to put an end to all that.

Pack trains would disappear; the people would have no use for stage coaches, stock breeders would go to the root house, and in half a century no horse would be seen outside of museums and zoological gardens.

But the horse did not go. The introduction of the steam car was followed by greater attention being given to the breeding of horses, and as men began to travel faster over the steel rails he was turned to make better time on the backs of his racers and behind his trotting stock.

The horse to-day is a more finely developed, and more highly prized animal than he was in the days when he was man's only reliance to carry him between distant points. He is faster, more enduring, and if not more intelligent than his forebears, he is a better all round animal than ever before.

He cannot be driven away or exterminated. With all his faults—and he has enough of them—with his tricks, his fear, his timidity and his sometimes ferocity he is the best beast in which man could have a use. He will be ridden and driven until man becomes so civilized that he will regard it as a sin and degradation for any of God's product to look through a bridle. Then, possibly, the horse will become a member of the general family and eat his oats with a fork—Exchange.

PISTOLS AND RAZORS.

FRANKFORT, Ky., June 8.—A bloody riot was narrowly averted Sunday afternoon by the bravery of several private citizens going to the rescue of two policemen. An excursion of 500 Negroes from Louisville came in, and two Negroes on it were fighting when they got off the train. Chief Tobin and Officer Brown grabbed them at once, but were set upon by the other Negroes and knocked down. Ed Callahan, Russell Hughes, Lee Cohen and Tommy Newman, who were standing in a drug store near by, grasped the situation, armed themselves, and started to the rescue.

Callahan seized a corn knife lying handy, and aiming it at about his head, yelled to the crowd to clear the way or get cut. He soon reached the struggling officers. Hughes, who is a muscular young druggist, got a pistol, and, clanking it, knocked the blacks right and left and followed Cohen and Newman moved his way to Tobin and Brown. They then formed a circle around the two arrested Negroes, pointed their pistols at the crowd, and finally landed their prisoners in the lockup. Meantime nearly every colored visitor, including the women, drew a pistol and were engaged in struggling to get to the officers. The colored women did more fighting than the men, and actually succeeded in knocking down both the officers and one of the rescuers. Had not come as quickly Tobin and Brown would have been beaten to death, and this would have precipitated a regular race war, as the Louisville blacks all killed Officer Brown's father three years ago, and the feeling then engendered has never died.

A FORECAST.

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 8.—The scenes to Lexington Tuesday night were more like the close of a successful campaign than the beginning of a state convention. At Jo Blackburn's headquarters in the Phoenix hotel free silver demonstrators are packed in until the old commodore, "like sardines in a box," is a descriptive necessity.

Following will probably be the state at Wednesday's convention: Delegates at Large—Joseph C. Blackburn, John S. Rhea, W. P. Ellis, P. Wat. Hamilton, National Committee—James H. Goodnight, Temporary Chairman—Chas. J. Branton, Permanent Chairman—Chas. K. Wheeler. Chairman of the National Committee—William Goodnight. Secretary of the Convention—William Goodnight.

The convention will undoubtedly be an unmitigated success for the free and unlimited coinage of silver, at a ratio of 16 to 1; that congress be demanded to immediately restore it to the ratio of 16 to 1, and that our disapproval of the financial policy of this administration be also declared.

It has been agreed unanimously that the convention should include Hon. Jo C. S. Blackburn as the unbeaten nominee of the democratic party for United States senator, and that the support be demanded of all democrats in the next general assembly.
